

I write to share my gratitude for your ongoing engagement in the life of our university and to express my excitement as we approach a major milestone — the public launch of With You: The WashU Campaign this Thursday, May 1. I am pleased to share this video message from Chancellor Martin and a preview of his email announcing the campaign.

The campaign will be a sustained and focused fundraising effort over the next five years to deepen our mission of discovering knowledge, forming leaders, and treating patients by realizing the ambitious vision outlined in our strategic plan. With you, we will lean into WashU's strengths and tackle some of society's deepest challenges while preparing the next generation of world leaders.

This effort is a long-term investment in the university and represents our promise to effect even greater change in the decades to come. Our partnership with WashU's philanthropic community will be front and center: We know we are stronger when we work together toward common goals. We are clear-eyed about the challenges ahead but steadfast in our optimism about all the good that we can accomplish.

As a university volunteer, your continued commitment and service are critical. Thank you in advance for helping to write this new chapter of WashU history.

I'm honored to embark on this journey with you.

Warmly,
Pam
